Breaking News - Next club meeting at the Cousins house – Wine Tasting successful racer in the early 50's. It is a six-cylinder supercharged 140-hp roadster that requires 110 octane fuel because of the high compression ratio. On Friday morning we drove to the track with a five-gallon can to get gasoline so Al could drive the race car to the track later that day. The race track was deserted. Al

the car, no luck. Soon we had the battery down and had to jump from another of Martine's MGs. We finally gave up. We had no tools. Martine came along with a can of ether. When that didn't work he pulled the plugs and cleaned them. The car finally started and I followed Al to the track. Throughout the weekend the break. The famous corkscrew of Laguna Seca is scary the first time through. The course drops down a steep hill making quick left, right, left turns. I can't imagine what that would be like at speed. Someone took a picture of us on the track. Notice how I am hanging on for dear life. I had no seat belt. I had overheard

I'm sorry to have missed the St. Pat's Day Parade. I understand that we had a half dozen or so cars participate on a reasonably nice day. I kept Al Moss company on a trip to Monterey for a vintage car race weekend. Al drove an old MG owned by Don Martine. We stayed at the Martine Inn in Pacific Grove. This is a top-drawer B and B on the bay with a great view and excellent accommodations. Seals and sea otters were cavorting in the rocky surf. Martine has twenty something collector cars, mostly MGs. A half dozen are stored at the Inn for guests to view. The racing event was sponsored by HMSA, one of the west coast organizations promoting vintage racing. MGs were the featured marque and given extra track time for a reunion race. A number of historic MG race cars came out of hibernation for the event. The car that Al drove was a 1936 MG NB. It was a very was having trouble with the card reader when a good-looking blonde drove up to the pumps in a track-owned minivan. She was dressed for work in office clothes and high heels. She soon had Al straight on using the pump. I asked Al later why he got a gorgeous blonde to help him when if it had been me, I would have got a Hell's Angel biker babe with "Biker Grandma" tattooed on her chest. That afternoon we tried to start car was difficult to start when cold, and it was cold. On Saturday I had every layer of clothing available on my bod. After Al took the car out for practice, he said it was a handful. The steering was sloppy loose and the right front brake kept locking up. The car darted all over the place. He was not happy. Finally, on the second day he said enough is enough and hung up his helmet. On Saturday, Al took me around the track during lunch someone who knew the car tell Al to tie the passenger door shut because it had a tendency to open during a race. Every right turn had me hanging on to the dashboard underside in case the door opened. Oh, by the way, ask Al what he paid for that 110 octane racing fuel.

Happy motoring.

I WANT YOU

That's right, Uncle Sam was a Da Bocce Boy at one time, that's why he wants you. Join up with the rest of the Da Bocce Boys at Joe Tully's house for some sand bowling for dollars. There are current openings, but with Sam on the case they may close down before you know it, so let Joe know...you need him!!

TRASH TALK

Once again, free food trumps any and all other means to get "volunteers" to sign up for trash duty. The club decided to one up the government and offer its own stimulus package for trash pickers. Sort of a modern era WPA program. (if you're too young to know what the WPA is, ask your neighbor at the next meeting.) After doing trash on Saturday, April 5th, members will be treated to breakfast at Café Jose.

We can't tell you who is free-loadi....ah, that is volunteering, but their initials are: Al Moss, Bob Boydston, Scott Mangarpan, Greg Zucco, Stephanie Giesbrecht, Vince Monaci, Karl Scheinuck, Jim Bradley. You might check with Jim Bradley to see if he needs anyone else.

POST CARDS FROM THE PAST — PART CINQ

Who hasn't heard the Big Fish Story or the Tall Tale or the It's Bigger or It's Better brag? Those who fudge a little are annoying, but those who can really spin a yarn and tell amazing whoppers amuse us. To pass the point of deception and enter the realm of the impossible is what early postcard makers hoped to achieve with their lines of Exaggeration postcards. In the United States, many states were once known by their agriculture, and postcards featuring the biggest apples, oranges, potatoes or any other crop were excellent sellers. In arid areas without crops, why not show a cowboy riding a giant jackrabbit. These postcards always make me smile .
